

SEMI-WEEKLY INTERIOR JOURNAL.

VOL. XXI.

STANFORD, KY., FRIDAY, JULY 21, 1893.

NO. 41

LONDON, LAUREL COUNTY.

—Dick Harbin is rejoicing over another boy at his house.
—Logan, the youngest son of Col. R. R. Ewell, is ill with typhoid fever.
—Theo. G. Moran went to Rockcastle Springs Thursday to attend the hop given to the guests.
—A car load of Wyoming horses arrived Sunday and attracted a splendid gathering of loafers.
—Mrs. M. E. S. Posey and three children, of Louisville, are on a visit to her sister, Mrs. Emma Smith.
—H. C. Eversole has begun his new residence, which will be a handsome one when completed. His son, P. C. Eversole, is also building a nice house on the same lot.

—The barn of John May, living east of London, was consumed by fire Friday. His crop of wheat which was stacked against the barn was burned with it. Incendiary.

—The city dade are having gravel from Rockcastle river put upon Main street and if they will now have the sidewalks fixed up, the people will rise up and call them blessed.

—Smiling Dave Jackson is no longer an applicant for the post-office here, the Louisville Tin and Stove Co. having increased his salary over that the post-office would be.

—J. D. Pitman has my thanks for a round trip pass to Rockcastle Springs over his stage line, and I am going to take advantage of it too, when Manager F. J. Campbell does accordingly.

—Ad. Reese and family have gone to Indiana for a 30 days' visit. James Boreling is at home from Lawrenceburg. Mrs. John W. McGee and two daughters left last week with her sister, Mrs. Alma Dibble, for a two months' visit to New Orleans.

—The Laurel circuit court convened here Saturday. The only person sent to the penitentiary so far is John Lucas, for forgery. He plead guilty and the jury gave him one year. Judge J. W. Alcorn, of Stanford, and Hon. J. A. Craft, of Louisville, are the only visiting attorneys in attendance so far. The court adjourned Tuesday, Judge Clark and Commonwealth's Attorney Ramsey having decided that the special call was unconstitutional. Four days of hard work had been done, most of which will have to be annulled, as well as the work of the grand jury. The juries will probably not get any pay.

—The Knights of Pythias gave a free ice cream supper at Jackson Hall Saturday night. The London Brass Band furnished the music and occupied the stage. In the centre of the room were three large tables beautifully decorated with flowers. The program was music first, after which Hon. E. K. Wilson spoke in regard to the order and explained its foundation and object for which it was formed. This speech was probably the best speech he ever made unless in a private conversation with his best girl. When Mr. Wilson was done, ice cream was served to all and in the meantime Judge W. L. Brown thanked the Honorable Knights in behalf of the guests. Every one having had his satisfaction of ice cream and cakes and the cigars having been passed around to the gentlemen to save until after the entertainment, the tables were cleared away and the dancing commenced and continued until the clock struck 12. I never saw a crowd of 120 people enjoy themselves better. Those present had been selected as the personal friends of the Knights and as a guest I can freely say, as can all present, that a more hearty welcome, from the bottom to the brain, no one could wish for.

DANVILLE.

—The Gas Co. declared a semi-annual dividend of 4 per cent.

—H. K. Hay wants to go back to the Legislature and has announced himself a candidate.

—Editor H. E. Woolfolk is sunbathing with Ex-President Harrison and other distinguished personages at Cape May.

—Miss Alice Holmes of Stanford, who has been the guest of the Misses Moore, near town, has returned home. J. H. Engleman has returned from the World's Fair. E. W. Lee and daughters are also back from a visit to the great show. Rev. R. H. Caldwell is slowly recovering from his recent severe accident, but is still confined to his bed.—A devotee.

—Mrs. Howerton has been located in Boston. She writes to her husband begging him to let her return, as she can neither eat, sleep nor weep, and believes her mind cannot long stand the strain. She said she had a letter from her home and she loved it so she would not kill it. She told Mr. Howerton she had written her brother, John Brooks, asking him if she could live with him and care for his children. Some member of her family will after her and bring her home. Many people advise Howerton to dispose of his property in Paris, take his wife and move to some place where they are not known and each live for the happiness of the other.

—London suffered a $6,000,000 fire Monday night.

LANCASTER, GARRARD COUNTY.

—Mr. E. W. Harris is taking the list of taxable town property.
—The Danville base ball club came over Wednesday afternoon and were defeated by the local nine by the score of 20 to 10.

—Garrard county has two places to be filled by Collector Roles, but the applicants are as thick as dillars in hales. Here's hoping they will all succeed.

—Judge Bethshares, of Paducah, has declared the local option law unconstitutional and it is said that action will be taken upon the same in the Court of Appeals in September.

—Since the park in the centre of the public square has been converted into a base ball ground for the use of the busy boys of the town, there is scarcely a sprig of grass left. If it could be kept clean and used for the purposes for which it was intended, it would be an ornament to the town.

—Mr. John Wanamaker has policies upon his life amounting to $1,500,000. This is a pretty large sum to pay for John when he "shuffles off this mortal coil," but then it is said that John out of the proceeds of his cheap clothing store, in connection with his Sunday school, managed to contribute about a hundred thousand to help elect Mr. Harrison and was rewarded with a seat in the cabinet, he certainly has a right to continue to lay up treasures on earth to be used for better purposes when he goes hence.

—Our town was honored by a visit from Mr. George C. Webster, manager of the Keeley Institute at Crab Orchard, on Tuesday last. He has charge of the States of Indiana and Kentucky and has been successful in every respect. He is a gentleman of culture, genial in his manner, kind-hearted and sympathetic and ever ready to lend a helping hand to those who need assistance. It is a pleasure to meet a gentleman of such attainments, and he may be assured that he will always meet a cordial welcome in our hospitable town.

—It will be a great relief to the public generally when all the public offices at the disposal of the government officials are filled. There is more noise and excitement kept up over who shall be post-master at some country cross roads, or watch at some distillery than there is over the crops by which the people are to be fed, and the prices that are to bring relief to the country, at a time when it is shaken from centre to circumference by a financial panic, the like of which is not within the memory of the oldest inhabitant, and the outcome of which no man can foresee.

—Ed Marshall, brother of Thomas F. Marshall, died on the 10th inst. in San Francisco. He was a celebrated orator and had a tempestuous career. He was a soldier in the Mexican war, fought several duels and was conspicuous as a politician in Kentucky and California. He delivered a lecture in Lancaster many years since on the life and character of John C. Breckinridge. He read from manuscript and had only a small audience. His lecture did not come up to public expectation.

—Speaking of John C. Breckinridge recalls the fact that he frequently addressed the voters of Garrard at the old courthouse in Lancaster and always attracted large audiences. Roger Hanson was also in the habit of visiting our town and addressing the people in the days when he was an old line whig. He once met with more than his match in Garfield, a democratic speaker, who accidentally camped on his trail.

Teachers' Institute.

During the sitting of the Lincoln county Institute for white teachers, which convenes Aug. 7, there will be besides the regular order of instruction, a spelling contest each afternoon, the person who spells the greatest number of words correctly during the session to receive a prize of $5 from the editor of the INTERIOR JOURNAL. The second best speller will be awarded a copy of that paper one year free. Also a suitable prize will be given the best essay on any subject appertaining to the conduct of public schools.

A prize will also be given for the best declamation by male teachers, both prizes to be given by Prof. W. C. Grinstead, who will instruct the Institute.

Music will be a feature of the session, by some of our best vocalists. It is very much desired that the citizens of Stanford and vicinity attend as much as is convenient for them to do so.

Wednesday, the third day, is especially set apart as trustees' day, when we trust every trustee of the common schools in the county will attend.

It is fully expected that each teacher will do the work assigned him during the session, thereby demonstrating the fact that each and every district has a competent and willing teacher.

W. F. McCLARY, Co. Supt.

—The director of works, the fire marshal and the president and vice-president of the Hercules Iron Co. have been held to the grand jury at Chicago for knowingly permitting the erection of the death trap for so many firemen.

Happy Jack Visits Rowland.

STANFORD, July 20.—I was down at Rowland the other day. The place looks lonesome. Saw a fellow leaning against the fence who had avel some cash in the last 15 years and had built him a nice little house for his nice little wife and nice little boy. The truth is, he had begun to think he was a nice man. He looked like he was thinking. He looked like his thoughts were "far away." Expect they were down about Lebanon Junction, or out about Corbin. (Were you ever at those places? Lots of lizards and lots of crawfish; lots of them.) He looked troubled. His face was as long as my leg and he was as serious and grave as a tombstone. Seemed to be talking to himself.

"I have to leave my nice little home; thought I was settled; wonder if there is not a side and a man in this question of 'removal' that the railroad magnates and the public, too, have almost forgot to think about? Wonder if the railroad employes don't compose that side and that man? Wonder if anybody cares or thinks about the fellow that looks like me?" I tell you it's pretty tough, pretty tough. I do hate to move.

I moved up a little closer. "Mister, come over here, will you? I am sad today; am weary and heavy laden and am looking for some one to give me a rest. Can't you rest me just a little bit? I'm fatigued. I want to talk some; I must talk some; I will die if I don't talk some to somebody, and you look like a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief, and listen to me now, won't you? Please listen some." I listened.

"I heard a bell ringing up at Stanford a few nights ago. They told me it was a meeting of the Commercial Club, I believe they called it. It seems that we fellows down here were the commerce, from the proceedings of the club. They talked about bringing in a paper mill, and a planing mill, and a shoe mill, and a cotton mill, and a flour mill and all sorts of a mill and every mill the club named seemed to be grinding on us, as the main feature of their chat was to buy us fellows up down here at $25 on the $100. Do you see that nice little house? I built that; took me 15 years; my little boy was born there; I do hate to move. He who spoke as never man spoke said, 'Do unto others as you would have them do to you.' Mister, is your club doing that? You don't talk like that Good Man and I am afraid your club will club us to death, or help do it. What do you think about it?" I opened not my mouth and the poor fellow kept on talking.

"Mister, I don't know you, but you look kinder kind and I must tell you about some more fellows, who I think can afford to lend us fellows a helping hand if they will. There are a lot of gentlemen down in Louisville behind a big house on 24 and Main, composed of Mr. W. H. Smith and his official staff of vice-presidents and some more—vices, whom I can't help thinking about. They are getting from $10,000 to $30,000 per annum and that much work will break any man down in a short time. What we need out here is a fellow who is not clean broke down by hard work—who can come out in a busy time over 200 miles of railroad that those gentlemen in their fatigue suits have never seen; who can hustle and make an engine of a hay rake if necessary, and who won't charge so much for his services as to require him to wear himself clean out in order to earn his pay. Just look yonder, Mister, at that gang of ten men from Louisville in their fatigue suits, painting that bridge over Logan's Creek. Why, Charlie Stewart, that black fellow you have up in Stanford, would paint it in three days for $150 a day and save half the paints. Look how they have painted the creek banks and the abutments. They may be some city politicians, tho', who have to have a job.

"Then this same Mr. Smith & Co. got $31 for hauling a car of coal from Pittsburgh and Pine Hill to Stanford and they get $14 from Jellico to Louisville, 150 miles further. I haven't sense enough to understand this, but does it seem strange that this community antagonizes the railroad? Again, you can get a car of lumber shipped from Florida to Chicago for less money than you can one from Williamsburg to Stanford. You can get a car load of cattle shipped from Rowland to Cincinnati for $25 and the same cattle in a bigger car that takes two more cattle for $22 on from Cincinnati to Jersey City and go to Jersey City the quickest.

"Mister, are you tired? I am loaded. I do think those fellows ought to be satisfied with less and not move us out and tempt you Stanford folks to take our little homes from our wives and children and turn them into other interests. That will reduce expenses." Their wives and daughters can still wear the silks that rustle like fiddle sticks and cause us to consider them as lilies of the field, that neither toil nor spin. My God, Mister, there is no place like home. Did you ever have your own doors shut against you?"

"Mister, get that Commercial Club to go in with somebody that will assist us in remaining under this little vine and fig tree that we planted on our wedding day and that had its first leaf the day Tommie was born." He hushed. I came away sorrowful. HARRY JACK.

Free Turnpikes—A Dangerous and Costly Experiment.

(To the Editor Interior Journal.)

The theory of free turnpikes is a captivating proposition, a theory that may deceive some sober minded men on its first presentation. It is a question that involve profound constitutional legal questions, serious political economy and stupendous financial interests. It is a question that every person who votes for it should fully understand in all its phases, else he may be plunging headlong into a condition that he does not fully understand and thereby involve serious consequences. It is better to suffer the evils we have than to fly to others we know not of. If some of the tolls collected are not accounted for, the remedy is to devise means by which they shall be. If some of the pikes are badly out of repair the remedy is by indictment. If the rates of toll are not uniform and are excessive the remedy is an equitable adjustment of the tolls by appropriate legislation. If these facts do exist and they are the occasion for the cry for free turnpikes it is like a doctor who has a patient sick from fever and administers a specific for flux. Admitting that the county could acquire control of the pikes, there are portions of the county that have no pikes and whose people seldom have occasion to use those in the other portions of the county. Would it be just to tax those who do not enjoy the pikes and at the same time require them to work their county roads without pay? The advocates of free turnpikes should be required to show and explain the legal method and authority by which they propose to acquire possession and control of the pikes, how long they will be in acquiring possession and control, and especially those pikes that extend into adjoining counties, and demonstrate to a mathematical certainty the entire cost of the proposed scheme. In other words, let them publish their proposed bill.

The man who votes for the proposition without being fully informed and thoroughly convinced of its advantages, is speculating with the county's interest and furnishing a hobby for some person to ride into office and secure the passage of a bill entirely novel and speculative. It does not qualify a person for office simply because he advocates a particular proposition, nor because he is against it. It is not an occasion for local prejudice or passion, but a question of grave political economy.

CITIZEN.

SARBOURVILLE.

—Judge Clarke adjourned court at London Tuesday and came home to open court here next Monday.

—Mrs. Otis C. Black, who has been sick for some time, is rapidly improving. S. B. Dishman will leave in a few days for an extended trip to Letcher and Knott counties.

—Tom Marney was shot and fatally wounded while entering, or attempting to force an entrance into the store-room of a man by the name of Perkins, at Corbin. It was a son of the proprietor of the store who did the shooting and it occurred about 2 o'clock Tuesday morning.

—Judge Tinsley, H. C. Faulkner and Smith and John Hays are attending court at Pineville. A. K. Cook, of Pineville, was in town Sunday, en route from the Manchester Court. Commonwealth's Attorney Henry L. Howard, of the Horton district, was here Sunday a few hours.

—Col. D. K. Rawlings, of this place, will leave in a few days for St. Louis, where he goes to fight a petition in a law suit involving from $7,000,000 to $10,000,000 in money and property, and is one of the most important suits ever brought in this country. Your correspondent is informed that Col. Rawlings and his partner at law, Hon. John H. Wilson, who in fact is chief counsel in the case, will get a very large fee out of it.

—It comes to us in a rather roundabout way, but nevertheless it is a fact, that Prof. J. A. Stephens, of Union Normal College, Flat Lick, and Miss Nannie Anderson, the accomplished daughter of W. B. Anderson, mayor of this place, are to be married the latter part of next month. The bridesmaids will be Miss Roberta Chinn, of Lexington, and Miss Mayme Costello, of this place. I can not definitely name the groomsmen; in fact the whole business is a sort of secret, but I think the public might as well have it first as last and there is no sheet more worthy of the distinction of first telling it than the reliable I. J.

On Trial.

There's a good way to buy a medicine, but it's a pretty hard condition under which to sell it. Perhaps you have noticed that the ordinary bit or miss medicine doesn't attempt it. The only remedy of its kind so remarkable in its effects that it can be sold on this plan is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. As a blood-cleanser, strength restorer and flesh builder there's nothing like it known to medical science. In every disease where the fault is in the liver or blood, as Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness and the most stubborn Skin, Scap and Scrofulous affections, it is guaranteed in every case to benefit or cure, or you have your money back.

To every sufferer from Catarrh, no matter how bad the case or how long standing, the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy say this: "If we can't cure it, perfectly and permanently, we'll pay you $500 in cash." Sold by all druggists.

—The score of a base ball game at Brenham, Tex., stood 111 to 11.

EVERY FRIDAY.

If the people of Lexington do not make short work of the "Heaven" being established there by Mrs. Francis and Mrs. Armour, of Richmond, and others, to propagate the Illinois "Christ's" doctrine, they ought to be ashamed of themselves. Kentucky should afford no place for cranks, who take up with the disgusting fancies of Schweinfurth, who seems to be the head of a huge harem. The days of miracles and the immaculate conception of virgins have passed, but these people pretend to believe otherwise. A number of virgins have produced sanctified children since they entered Schweinfurth's "Heaven" and yet the old scamp has not been prosecuted for bastardy. The laws of Illinois are more lax on that subject than in Kentucky.

We observe that Senator Blackburn has hied himself to the fastnesses of Virginia. We also observe that he has not been talking much with his mouth about silver recently. Two years ago he was one of the most blatant of silver men. To-day he hardly knows "where he is at." The financial maelstrom has completely engulfed him and convinced him that "he never did know nothin' 'bout finances no how." He and Congressmen Goodnight came all the way from Washington to give the convention assembled at Louisville wisdom on the silver question, but both, in the light of subsequent events, seem to have fallen into Innocent's deusectude.

HAVING been there himself and being satisfied that the Legislature is the vanity of vanities, Hon. George Vest Triplet, author of "The Girl in the Hammock," and one of the editors of the Owensboro Inquirer, warns Jim Richardson, of the Glasgow Times, of that form of insanity which would cause a man to want to serve his State as a law-maker. We dislike ourselves to see so good an editor as Richardson spoiled, and we therefore rise and with the earnestness born of so important a cause, second the motion that he drive away the bee that seems to be getting into his bonnet.

RETRIBUTION has come thick and fast to the Denver people. The wild-eyed silverites, who met in convention there and made so many intemperate utterances, including threats of repudiation, put their feet in it most signally. They destroyed the credit of the State and caused the East to be so doubtful of their banks that no money could be raised, even on apparently gilt-edged paper. In consequence three of the Denver banks suspended Monday and five Tuesday. It is a pretty costly lesson, but it will be more thoroughly impressive for that reason.

A NEGRO has been found in Virginia, if the dispatch is to be credited, who can discount a cat with her nine lives. The story is that a mob hanged a negro near Norfolk for burning a farmer's barn, poisoning his cattle and threatening to kill the owner, and while he was hanging fired a number of shots through his carcass. The next morning the body was gone and Monday night the negro was arrested in Norfolk. In the absence of a fair story this will do pretty well to relate to the marines.

A DISPATCH from our old county in Virginia says that Elder Ellis, of Salt Lake City, has converted 33 persons, mostly young women, to Mormonism in and around the small station of Beaver Dam. If this be true things must have changed since the "dissolution of Elizabeth," or men have gotten so scarce the girls have given up all hope of getting one apiece and are willing to take a piece of one.

The editor of the Frankfort Capital predicts, and asks that the prediction be marked, that there will be but two parties represented in the next Legislature and the populists will not be in it. Come to think of it, there is no crying need for more than two; or one, for that matter. The people's party failed to fill a long-felt vacuum and its demise causes neither surprise nor sorrow.

W. M. HILL, who has been on the editorial force of the Courier-Journal for a number of years, will, it is said, go to New York this fall to become dramatic critic on a leading daily there. His forte and his inclination lead him to the new field, where we hope he will find as many friends as he leaves. Of one thing he can be sure—he will never find warmer ones.

The Richmond Register calls attention to a clause in the new constitution that we had overlooked. It is that no candidate shall be allowed to run for office who has not paid for his announcement in the newspapers. Candidates in this county will please observe and govern themselves accordingly.

The total cost of the World's Fair to July 1 was $20,610,160.

Is an address before the bankers at New York, Controller of the Currency Eckels hit the nail on the head when he stated that most of the failures of the last month are due to the booms and other speculations of the West and Northwest and to bad banking methods, the disasters being confined to those sections, while the East and South, where more conservative methods prevailed, had escaped. The evil that the booms wrought lives after them. It will be many years before the country recovers from its blating effect.

While Mr. Bruce Haldeman is taking in the World's Fair, Mr. A. Y. Ford is filling his place as managing editor of the Courier-Journal most acceptably, and Mr. Eugene W. Newman, "Savoyard," is holding down in his usual capable way the editorial page of the Times in the absence of Farmer Logan, who has combed the hayseed out of his hair, donned a hand-me-down suit of clothes and is also taking in and being taken in by the Fair and its fakirs.

These are indeed days of record breaking. A letter sent from London made the circuit of the world in 62 days and eclipsed all former records.

—For a month the vicinity of Lawrenceburg, Ind., has been in an excited condition over the fact that a woman in black had been seen on various occasions in the densest portion of the woods in that section. Her screams could be heard at night, but diligent search failed to find her. The sheriff summoned a posse and after many nights' hunt finally found her under a straw pile close to the woods. She begged to be left alone, but was finally persuaded to go to town with the sheriff, who questioned her closely, but could get no information as to who she was or what her object was. She was almost starved to death, but her conversation convinced the officer that she was rational and now he is in a dilemma to know what to do with her.

—That fine gentleman, scholar and architect, George R. Jeeter, assisted by his able lieutenants, Kiah Frederic and Jeff Lutterell, has within three weeks transformed that structure known as the Christian church here for the last two or three centuries into a slightly building, with all the modern improvements of architecture. This has been done by knocking off the Masonic second story, elevating and giving a different pitch to the roof, building a belfry surmounted by a spire terminating in a finial and adding a gothic door to the entrance and gothic ventilators to the belfry. Other improvements are still going on in Liberty.

LIFE IS EVERYWHERE.

"The dead are everywhere. The mountain side, the plain, the wood found. All the vast earth, the fertile and the fair. In due vast burial ground."—N. Y. Tribune.

And life is everywhere. The mountain side, the plain, the wood found. All the wide earth, the fertile and the fair. In resurrection ground.

The withered leaf that crumbles to the sod, And lies, at winter, underneath the snow. Called upward by the voice of nature's God. For flowers shall blow.

The grass that falls beneath the mower's hand, And lies in lifeless heaps along the way. Shall give new life to hungry steeds that stand Beside the fragrant hay.

The rose that blossoms for a summer day, And withers when the evening sunset glows, Shall see upon to-morrow's stem a sterner rose. Another rose.

"From death to life," the snow-bound gardens sing. "From death to life," the icy streams reply. "From death to life, eternal life," they ring. "Ye live because ye die."

The old man stooping to lay down his load Of pain, or weariness, shall find, in truth, Somewhere, somewhere, in some serene abode, Eternal youth.

The poet, stammering thoughts the longer he speaks, Or reaching for the beautiful vain, Shall satisfied arise, no more to seek His lost idea again.

The scholar, digging deep for buried lore, The babe that knows no language, save "mama," Shall solve life's mystery, yet evermore Learn lessons new.

The youth that died when life had just begun, The maid that scarcely breathed love's opening song, The hero, dying when his work was done, Do not to death belong.

They are our own. They were and they shall be. The flower of life shall find its lost perfume. The rose of love shall bloom unfadingly Beyond the tomb.

Yes, death is but a prophecy of life. Interpreted, the life that is to be Is the fulfilling of this mortal strife In immortality.

We read it in the budding of the spray, We feel it in the palpitating air. Life rises from death is over everything And everywhere.

He Squared Accounts.

GOT square with a mean customer down in Pennsylvania the other day, and I've been hugging myself with joy over it ever since," said one of a party of merchants in an up-town hotel lobby the other night.

"The fellow, whose name is Meyer, keeps a wholesale and retail liquor store in Pittsburgh, and does a considerable business; but he is the meanest man to sell to I ever came across. He handles wines of the same character that I sell, but I never was able to make a customer of him. If he had come out fairly and squarely at any time and said he didn't want to buy of me, why I would have found no fault. Every man has a right to buy where he pleases, and his reasons for refusing to buy of one man or another are nobody's concern but his own. The meanness of this man, though, consisted in his accepting favors from me and wasting my time, when he always knew in advance that he would not buy anything from me.

"I make several trips to Pittsburgh every year, and for the past five years I have always made it a rule to call upon this man, being misled by his apparent cordiality and willingness to talk about my wines into the belief that he would sooner or later become a purchaser. He always received me with manifestations of great pleasure, asking insinuatingly whether I had brought along any new stories, for he was a wicked old cuss, and smoked my cigars with great gusto. Every time when I began to talk business to him, however, it was:

"I'm awful sorry, Mr. Klein, but I can't see my way clear to using your goods just now. Business has been very bad, and I am overstocked as it is. But I'll let you know as soon as I can may depend on it you'll get there yet."

"Well, I put up with that for two years. I wrote to him and got some very pretty replies, but never did I get an order. After that I put him down for a liar, and wasn't quite as free about inviting him out to dinner and loading him up with my best cigars; but still I pretended to be friendly and to believe his stories, because his trade is really worth having, and I thought he might possibly change his mind. Business is business, you know, and we can't always say what we think. I guess you've all been there. There is a limit to endurance, though, and when a man tries to play me for a fool the old Adam will get up and get the better of my principles of policy.

"So it happened on my last trip to Pittsburgh. I called on Meyer and was greeted in the usual effusive fashion. 'How are you, Mr. Klein?' I'm awfully glad to see you. What's the latest from the metropolis?' and all the rest of the lingo was as pat as usual. He coolly picked a cigar out of my vest pocket, hinted that it was about lunch time, and was as gay and fresh as though he had been buying a thousand cases a year from me. But when I asked him what chance there was of my booking an order from him he had an apology all ready for his inability to patronize my goods just then. 'I felt rather sore, and I told him with considerable heat that I thought he was treating me very shabbily.

"My dear Klein," he said, in a very consoling kind of voice, 'it does look kind of tough, but I assure you I can't help it. If you had come two weeks ago I would gladly have given you an order, but just as my stock ran out I got a chance to buy up a big lot of bankrupt goods at a great bargain, and now

I've got enough to last me six months at least. The next time you come I'll be right in shape."

"I was convinced he was lying, but I smothered my anger, and after a little talk I went away. About an hour later I ran across a competitor of mine with whom I am on very good terms. He told me he had been in town some days. "Whom have you seen here?" I asked him. He mentioned a number of names and among them was that of this man. 'Did you do anything with him?' I asked. "Yes," he said, 'I sold him a lot of wine this morning, and I expect to sell him some more this afternoon. By the way, old man, you are wasting your time on him. He's just playing you. I heard him say he wouldn't buy your goods at any price, but he enjoys holding you on.'

"Well, gentlemen, my temper doesn't often get on a tear, but it did just right up to the top notch then. I was so angry I couldn't talk, and I took several drinks and a big cigar to make me composed enough to think straight. I made up my mind then that I'd call in and see Mr. Meyer and let him know what I thought of him before I left Pittsburgh.

"The opportunity came the next day. I was in the neighborhood of his shop and I went in. He was talking to a typical Pennsylvania jay in his private office—the sort of fellow that runs a combination grog shop and grocery in a coal mining town. Evidently there was some difference between them, for as I came in I heard the jay say:

"You're a chargin' me too much. That whisky ain't worth no such price."

"Oh, Mr. Klein," the dealer called to me, 'step in here. You've come just in time. Mr. Jones, here, and I have a little dispute about the value of an article, and I think you can settle it. Mr. Jones, shake hands with Mr. Klein. Mr. Klein is an expert in liquors from New York, and he handles more in a week than you and I do in a year. Now, you'll admit, Mr. Jones, that he knows nothing of our argument, and doesn't know what price I've named. It'll be fair to both of us to leave it to him to name the value, won't it?"

"Yes," said the jay, 'I dunno but it would. I'm willin' ter leave it ter him."

"All right," said Meyer, 'so am I. Mr. Klein, will you tell us what the lowest selling price of that Gimmel Rath whisky is?"

"I tumbled at once. A good many of the dealers in our line use certain characters of the Hebrew alphabet for a price mark, and it was perfectly familiar to me. When he said Gimmel Rath whisky he implied $2.50 whisky—that is, whisky worth that much a gallon, and the use of the Hebrew was to prompt me, without letting the jay know as to the price he wanted me to name. Quick as a flash the idea struck me that there was a chance to get square.

"Well," said I, 'I know the whisky you speak of very well, but I should say the price would have to depend considerably on the quantity sold.'

"Oh, I'll buy a lot," said the jay, 'if I kin git the right figger.'

"Well," said I, 'to be frank with you, gentlemen, that Gimmel Rath whisky, I stopped and looked squarely into Meyer's face, 'brings two dollars ordinarily, but in pretty large quantities it can be bought for one dollar and seventy-five cents.'

"Well, it was worth all I had spent on Meyer to see the way he fell to pieces. He had been following me with

Blindness, Paralysis, Rheumatism

Guthrie, Ky., Sept. 9, 1891.

Dear Sirs:—More than two years ago my eyes began to fail me. I immediately applied to eminent oculists for relief; for eighteen months they treated without a particle of benefit. Finally, about three months ago I went totally blind, and as a last resort, I procured an Electropole, which, very much to the gratification of myself and family, has restored my sight. It has also greatly benefited my wife and daughter. My wife has been a subject of paralysis for more than two years, and my daughter a sufferer from inflammatory rheumatism for more than twelve years. All this has been effected in the last two months. Too much can not be said in praise of the Electropole. It is the possessor of the only one in existence and it could not be reproduced, all the wealth of the universe could not purchase it. I consider it the greatest invention of the age. Truly and gratefully yours, C. W. GREENFIELD, M. D.

ALTHOUGH it will be nearly a year before the election it is suggested that October will be a good time for the primary to nominate candidates for county offices. This will give ample time for those who want to run to enter the fight and it will permit scores of others to go into a better business than electioneering. What do the people say?

It is told that one of the colored teachers at the recent examination wrote in answer to the question: "Who were the two most prominent Kentuckians, who espoused the cause of the Confederate States?" "John Morgan Miller and Stonewall Jackson Hatcher."

The chief of police, Mr. G. T. Helm, was here yesterday on the trail of J. T. Bailey, who married in this county, and who escaped from the work-house at Danville while serving a fine of $100 for selling liquor unlawfully. He had been here, but had gotten wind of the policeman's coming and fled.

The 14th National Bank of Columbus, Ga., of which Mr. E. P. Owsley is cashier, makes a good showing in the call of the 12th. It has a capital of $150,000, surplus $50,000, loans and discounts $255,199 and individual deposits $109,000. As the cash on hand is over 47 per cent. of the deposits, there is no fear of a run on it, even if there were the slightest grounds for it.

The various privileges of the Fair were put up at auction Wednesday, but not bringing as much as the officers thought they ought, were taken down and will be let privately. A Lexington man offered $400 for the games of chance privilege, but all such things are to be strictly prohibited. Messrs. W. E. McWhorter and V. R. Coleman, of Casey, were up to bid on refreshments.

FOR pumping on a train in motion at McKinney Constable J. A. Shannon arrested Ben Compton and Hawks Wilkinson, who were fined $1 each, and failing to pay, were lodged in jail by Mr. Shannon Tuesday, where they spent one night. Some of the Stanford boys might be broken of their habit of pumping on trains before they break their necks. Constable Shannon seems to be making a "rep" against law-breakers. He has landed six in jail in a very short time.

THE news of the suspension of the First National Bank of Fort Scott, Kas., created but little surprise here, where some $25,000 or $30,000 of the stock is held. It has been in a shaky condition apparently for some time. Some $75,000 of its stock is held in Kentucky and was solicited by Mr. Ed Chenault, formerly of this place. This notice was posted Tuesday and is all that has been heard from there. "Owing to the steady withdrawal of depositors and our inability to collect assets, we deem it to the best interests of all concerned that this bank be temporarily closed. Assets are more than three times the liabilities." The capital of the bank is $300,000.

THE concert at Junction City Wednesday night for the benefit of the Baptist church was a very creditable and enjoyable affair. It consisted of vocal and instrumental performances, recitations, &c., some of a very high order of merit and deserving special mention, but as there were no printed programs and our reporter was unacquainted with most of the performers, he is barred from individual mention, save that the violin solo of Miss Isabella Bailey to accompaniment on the piano by her mother, Mrs. Steele Bailey, and the recitation of Miss Essie Burch were liberally and loudly applauded. Mr. B. H. Danks assisted in the orchestra numbers, which were well given. Among those who attended from here were Misses Sallie Moore, of Paris, Mary Pickett, Shelbyville, May Adams, Grays, Ann Shanks, Kit Baughman, Nettie Wray and Clara Lackey and Messrs. W. H. Wear, Gabe Lackey, J. Carroll Bailey, Wallace Withers, Will Severance and our reporter.

THOUGHTFUL people are beginning to realize that free turnpikes are not so great a blessing as they appeared at first. THE stockholders of the Cumberland Valley Land Co. met Wednesday and elected the old directory, with one exception, Gov. James B. McCreary being chosen in place of the one who declined to serve longer. The directory chosen, Messrs. Vincent Boring, Robert Boyd, James W. Fox, J. A. Craft, W. G. Welch and J. S. Hocker were present, and re-elected Messrs. Boring and Hocker president and secretary and treasurer, respectively. An order was made for the president to solicit bids for the sale of the salm, poplar, ash, cherry and cucumber timber on the lands, of which there are large quantities, and submit them to the finance committee. The lands lie in Harlan county and are rich in minerals and timber.

MARK TIDWELL'S GRIEVANCE

HERE came to a certain southern town, some years ago, a spanking four-horse team drawing a gaudily painted wagon, having as occupants a quartette of male singers, an accompanist who performed on a very small, wheezy melodeon, a German comedian, and a "doctor" all dressed in somber black coats and wearing glossy silk hats.
The horses were gayly caparisoned in flowing white banners, which bore, in huge red letters, the inscription: "Cyclone Oil for Man and Beast." This explained the business of the visitors and immediately drew a large crowd of village loafers to the courthouse square to witness the exhibition. It being Saturday, a greater portion of the assembly were country folk, who in the south use that day principally for trading and loafing when they come to town. The songs transported the audience, and the comedian, in a ridiculous make-up and costume, convulsed them; but when the "doctor" arose to sell his wares, and got well started in his address, his audience stood with bulging eyes in silent admiration, while listening with rapt attention to his remarks. Some showed by their manner that they were seriously impressed, and knowing looks would be exchanged when some great truth was hurled at them by this vender of a cheap life-saving balm. "Within the price of each and every one," his powers as a speaker were to them supreme, and when he had finished and opened his satchel to furnish suffering humanity his wares, Mark Tidwell, a long, lank, skull-skinned native, who had been standing with his hands thrust deep in the pockets of his yellow jean breeches, now turned to a companion and said: "Doggone my cats if that fellow don't beat Vance or speakin'!" Which remark was the greatest recommendation this "doctor" could have had in these mountains.

Uplifted hands stretched forth their money to receive this precious fluid of a dark reddish hue, in very small vials, wrapped in pink paper containing directions for use, and, as they purchased, made room for the outer ones, who were clamoring for an opportunity to buy. Mark finally edged his way to the "doctor" and said:
"Judge, I swar that war a good talkin' ye give, an' ef this hyar med'ine is es good es yer talkin', I'll jis' be durned ef I don't try er bottle of it."
The "doctor" assured him that it would cure anything that ever afflicted man or beast; that it was a sovereign remedy for stubborn maladies, and if properly used according to the directions accompanying each and every bottle it would restore the hair to a side of sole leather. Mark was convinced, and slowly pulled from the depths of his pocket a well-worn wallet, resembling a slab of old-fashioned gingerbread, and, after unwinding a quantity of shoestring from about it, produced his money, and then departed for his home with his purchase. Lord in his praise of the "doctor's" ability as an orator, to a neighbor who jogged along on his mule beside him.

The foregoing happened in the spring.
As the heat of the summer increased, so did the visitors to the mountains, and gay equipages thronged the drives.
One day, however, a gentleman, came to this resort who brought with him his coach, which soon became known far and wide among the villagers as the tally-ho, being the only one ever seen in that vicinity. So one afternoon, as the tally-ho was bowling along the principal street, filled with beautiful women and handsome men, Mark Tidwell was once more standing in front of the courthouse square—it being Saturday—and as he spied the coach rumbling toward him down the rough street he vehemently exclaimed to the bystanders:
"Dad burn th' hide of me ef hyar don't cum th' itle chap ergin'!"—and without further words he picked up a large stone and, as the coach passed him, heaved it with all his might at the vehicle. It struck just above the door and splintered that side of the coach, making a hole—as one of the passengers expressed it—"big enuff fer er cat ter jump through."

The occupants on top of the coach were in a high state of excitement and alarm. The gentlemen all sprang down and ran toward Mark to inquire into the cause of this indignity, when Mark reached for another stone, and shouted, as he sprang high in the air, cracking his heels together as he came down:
"Stan' back, yer sneakin', white-fiered buzzards! Ef yer lay yer han' on top-knot of one of ye! Back hyar ergin, air ye? With yer chunes an' yer docterin', an' er sellin' yer dad-binged pizen ter folks whar can't read."
Mark had made a terrible mistake in his men, for the owner of the coach, well known in the mountains—and to Mark especially—appeared and requested an explanation of this unwarranted assault. Mark's face fell as he recognized his friend, and his humility was very sincere as he said:
"Why, Lord love ye, kyernel, I swar I didn't 'low 'twus yuns whar was er top of thet thar thing. Yer see, I hain't jis' natcherly gut over thet pizen lellar whar cum durn nigh er puttin' of me in th' buryin'-ground with his pesky stuff, whint wasn't fitten ter put on er dog, much lessen er man, an' I hed m' min so sot on er layin' of him out whinst nex' I see him, thet when yuns fust driv up I 'low'd 'twus him, an' so I lungt th' air rock; but she war er leetle heavy an' fell lower than I expected—but fur thet yu'd er ben pizen'd by now, I reckon. But I'll squar' thet hole in thar, kyernel, I swar I will," he continued, pointing to the damage his "rock" had caused.

"But Mark," said the colonel, "such pastime as this will get you into trouble, even if practiced on the 'ile chap.' What has he done to you?"
"Waal," replied Mark, as he grinned sheepishly, "I don't much like to tell ye fellers, seein' as how it's sich a durned good joke on me, but it happened erbout like this:
"Ye see, I war standin' list'nin' to er feller whar hed slyceon ile ter sell, an' he made sich a powerful surreptitious talk erbout pollyticks an' 'figion an' sich, tell he put me kinder het up like, an' whinst he commenced ter talk erbout litle aillin's an' small pains er carryin' of people off, I begin to git one in the holler of my back, an' the mo' he talked the worse I begin ter feel, tell fust news I know'd he holler'd out thet de'th an' dest'ucktion was agwine to ketch up with alry man whar didn't take keer of hissef, an' jis' then an' thar I drapped my stick o' candy in the sand, fur I paid the skunk er quarter of er dollar, gut er bottul o' his pizen truck an' lit out fur home.
"I erawled in the bed that night an' tried to shuke off thet misery in m' back, but, bless yer soul 'u body, it wudn't be shuke with er cent, so in the mornin' the old 'ooman give me er curryin' with thet doggone ile, an' the nex' thing I know'd the misery was a rarin' 'round in m'er stummick. I tuk a dram er hictor er sich a matter two er three times. Then the 'ole 'ooman up an' 'low'd mebbe thet slyceon ile wud do me sum good (she kin read a bit, but I can't), so she taken ther red wrappin' paper from erroun' the bottul an' hit sed sumthin' like this: 'Continne thet op'rashin till thet pain ceasteth.' I axed her whint was thet meanin' of it, an' she 'low'd thet op'rashin war the doctor's word fur a-drinkin' of it. So I jis' then an' thar pintedly grabbed the bottul o' med'ine an' dreoned it at once swig—an' when thet stuff lit atop of the hictor I had tuk hit felt like two er three of these hyar box-ers son's er cummin' together when the engine is a-shiftn' of em down hyar to the deepeo, an' jis' then my innards took a flar. I jumped nine foot in the air an' cum down in er heap, like a chimbley thet hed been blowed down by the win' an' thet hictor an' thet ile wudn't mix no way I cud fix it. I sashayed to the right an' swung erouder with the side of the cabin, turned over the ash-hopper an' split lye all over m'er dogs—whar was a lyin' under thar—an' set 'em to howlin' like five hundred; made my way through the corn-patch on my shoulder-blades, an' lef a furrer thar like a harrow had gone plum through hit hictor ter er yoke o' oxins; stood on my head in the big road an' made a man's mule throw him, stampered the cattle an' set the pigs ter squealin' an' goin' on like durned pigs do when they gets skeered. The children gut ter cryin' an' the old 'ooman was a-blowin' the horn fur help, while I was a-layin' full length in the spring-branch with sumthin' in my stummick thet felt like four foot of barbed-wire fence doubled up in a ring, a bad full o' carpet-tacks an' a bushel hed full o' broke glass, all takin' turns at my liver an' sich.

"First thet barbed wire would straiten out er bit an' thenly back like a two-dollar clock spring. Then thet tacks wud spin erroun' like er flyin' jumpy at er sideshow, an' wud leave half o' ther annablers stuck pint first all 'roun' the route. Then thet glass would all fall down from the top of my chest, an' thet barbed wire wud jump at it an' chase it back ergin.
"Thet thing kep' up tell thet ole 'ooman flung er gallon er so o' water-melon-seed tea later in' frame, with a quart of sargum-mellasses an' lye soap, to give hit flaverin', an' then I begin ter git better, but I war str'ntin', I kin tell yer, an' I war er frathin' at thet muck saum's er mad dog.
"Hit tuk me two weeks ter find m'er cattle, an' the m'm wargot flung by his mule me one day soon arterwards an' gonged the left eye mighty nigh out o' me an' cum purty nigh a-bentin' of me to de'th, but he gut tired o' hictin' of me, or he wud of done it. But thet wurst thing of the whole bizness was, when I show'd up ther nex day arter thet dosin', my own dog didn't know me an' whirled in an' gnawed a hole in my leg the size o' a pint cup.
"An' thet's why I flung the rock, kyernel, an' I swar to goodness I didn't know 'twus you, an' thought mebbe I hed gut my chance at the 'ile chap, fur he driv four eritters an' so did you, an' 'twas that whar fooled me.
"But I'll squar' ther hide in thet waggin, ef I don't, darn me!" he concluded, moving off, while the owner of the damaged vehicle, much amused at this just grievance, wondered how he would do it.—Charles E. Shoher, in Frank Leslie's Newspaper.
—Worse Yet.—"My gracious!" said Aunt Jimena. "The big storm in Injanny, the paper says, carried everythin' before it." "Skakely everything, Jimena," said Uncle Reuben. "It left ruin behind it."—Puck.
—"So this is Simpson's new house; he told me that it was built on very high ground." "Christopher Columbus, it is!" He paid one hundred dollars a foot for it.—Inter Ocean.
